

Red Alien Intelligence

Slave/Scientific Guinea Pig

You were a member of an extra-terrestrial race that had been enslaved by another alien civilization. Your people suffered greatly under the Overlords (as they were called in your tongue), but you were powerless to stop them.

You specifically were culled from a herd of manual laborers and brought to a testing facility or laboratory of some sort. No one explained anything to you, but that was the only explanation you could think of for the horrible tortures they put you through: they were experiments, bent to discover something.

The last thing you recall was being taken to a chamber, physically restrained and given a crystal to hold. Then a strange device nearby lit up brightly. And there your memory ends.

The crystal and device are both still here, though everything else seems to have changed. The architecture here is familiar, and these strange ape-men are swarming everywhere. Speaking of which: how did you come to inhabit an ape-man body? This is all very strange. If you understood any of the ape-men's speech, you might be able to figure out what is going on, but their language is nonsense to you. Figuring out what is going on should be your primary goal, though escaping this place is also important: you can get answers later on, once you know you're safe.

Out of Character: If you discover anything at all about the alien intelligence that is upstairs, then you quickly recognize it as one of the Overlords. And consequently, it must be stopped in whatever its goals and punished for what they did to your people.