

Captain Louis Coulon de Villiers

Background

You are a 44 year old professional soldier from a military family, born and raised in New France. Though your troops outnumber the British in the region, you are under orders to not initiate any fighting. If the British attack, you are allowed to retaliate, but otherwise you are to stay put. Needless to say, this is tremendously frustrating. You are here to clear the British out of the Ohio valley, yet some bureaucrat in Quebec demands your hands be tied behind your back.

How will you drive the British out and prevent war? And what will you do about your headstrong and promiscuous wife?

Dramatis Personae

Joseph Coulon de Jumonville is your half brother. In your proud military family, he's never really succeeded as well as the others. So he's always trying to prove his courage and make a name for himself. You do your best to keep him safe and make sure he doesn't get into too much trouble.

Marie-Amable Prudhomme de Villiers is your young headstrong wife. The marriage was purely for political convenience, and neither of you love the other. Would you be better off with her gone? How can you deal with her and still save face?

George Washington commands the British troops after his predecessor William Trent's poor showing. Washington has a reputation for having a bad temper. Could you goad him into action somehow?

"French Margaret" Montour is your half-Seneca half-sister. She is sworn to be loyal to Washington, but you hope she retains some family loyalty as well.

Shingas the Terrible is a Delaware chief surprisingly willing to work with the French. And you need all the allies you can find. Captain Pipe Hopocan acts as his interpreter.

François Coulon de Villiers' Régiment Ouest, deep frontier badasses just back from establishing a trading fort on the Missouri river in the Louisiana territory. François is your older brother and Jumonville's half brother.

French troops: Francois Tourin, Surgeon. Sous-Lt. Jean-Claude LePrevost. Sgt. Louis Mennal. Pierre Sebastien Daunet, Jean Pierre Fay, Jean Baptiste Kerle, Antoine Roux, and Joseph Laviolette
